

Donaldson Hill is an independent fundraising, planned giving, strategic planning and governance consultant for faith communities and non-profits organizations.

For thirteen years prior to beginning his own practice, he served as chief development officer for the national and global ministries of the United Church of Christ. In that role he oversaw the Church's national planned giving program, was responsible for major and annual gifts programs, and worked with staff in all settings of the church to build fundraising capacity and financial health. He currently works as a consultant for the Living Water Association

Don has worked in a variety of settings including education, human rights, theological education and the arts. His past work has included leadership positions with Andover Newton Theological School, the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee and Outward Bound and has taught at Union Theological Seminary and New York University.

Don is a Board Source certified governance trainer and also serves as Chair of the Board of Directors of Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley, California and is a member of Mt. Zion Congregational United Church of Christ in Cleveland.
